LETTER NO. XXIV.

JOPPA AND ADIEN TO CANAAN.

S. S. Kiefern, in the Joppa office
(Tuesday, March 17, 1903.)

Dear Judge: We have boarded the steamship for Egypt and are standing off Joppa. Behind a locomotive made in Philadelphia, Pa., we came by rail 544 miles from Jerusalem to Joppa. The route passes over the plain of Rehoboth, or Gai, where David gained a signal victory over the Philistines, thence down the hillside to the valley of Sorek the home of Samson and the scene of many of his singular exploits; thence out upon the splendid plain of Sharon by Ramleh and Lydda to the ancient city by the sea.

Joppa means "beauty," and the picture now before my eyes certainly merits this charming name. The lashing sea and finging foam beating over the long ledge of rocks into the narrow harbor of quiet waters; the white stone houses rising terrace-like in irregular rows, above another, 116 feet above the sea; the radiant and fragrant background of flowers and fruits; the vast stretch for miles of orange groves golden with the most luscious oranges that grow on this earth; the lemon, pomegranate, fig and stately palm; and behind all, the blue mountain wall of Judah transfigured by that strangely refined and mystic atmosphere that hangs over all this hallowed land, and its history—delight the eye and enchant the mind.

Myth and history have always been busy with Joppa. The ragged rock that breaks the sea at the north end of the bay is a relic of pristine myths, an impressive caveat to dotting parents against the exploitation of the beauty and virtues of their offspring. For on this bleak monument of the hazard of parental boat once lay chained a beautiful maiden, exposed to the wrath of this stormy sea, the victim of the envy of female rivals stung by the boasts of her mother. The envy is all the more desperate when the boasting rests on substantial basis. The painful aspect of the situation is much relieved in this case to find in the rock close to the marks of her eroding chains, the footprints of her heroic lover, Perseus, who bore her as bride to an ideal home. Heading against these jagged reefs there once were anchored the immense cedar rafts of Solomon, floated down from the Phoenician coast. Perhaps the wise man came in all the splendor of his kingdom and stood on yonder strand to welcome from the sea the precious material that genius was fabricate for the temple of his God. From the same spot the shirking prophet of Gath-hepher looked anxiously in the offing for a hospitable ship to aid his escape from his hateful task. Perhaps beyond the onest, sandy beach beyond the harbor, God's living ship disgorged its bleached and huddled freight upon the friendly land. Upon a flat roof like that yonder, where I stood an hour ago, Peter learned the pity and patience of God with his weak and wayward children, and his worldwide compassion. How significant it is that God brought this apostolic foe of Foreign Missions with all his vast prejudices and "stiffness of heart" to this same old port of the recalcitrant Jonah, and lodged him there on the wash and roar of that stormy sea to teach him the same lesson that Jonah learned in that stormy school nearly a thousand years before. With six brethren from Joppa to share responsibility he moved thither thirty-two miles to Caesarea along the very coast where Jonah ended his unique voyage and held his theological "Commencement," ready at last to go forth with a message of repentance and hope for Nineveh. More tractable than the ancient prophet, Peter started on his mission at once. During all the pregnant journey of that long and memorable day a mystic monitor may have kept whispering in his ear:

"Jonah's whale will get you, if you don't look out."

Does not seem long since Dorcas lay dead in an upper room of one of the white houses of Joppa. From Lydda, thirteen and a half miles from Joppa on the Jerusalem road, Peter hurried to that upper room, and soon the bereaved widows that wept her death welcomed her back from the unseen realm.

The eye sweeps down the great Philistine plain and up along Sharon to glorious Carmel. Memory is busy with populous cities that lie buried there, the mighty deeds that live, and the lessons of God and man that still instruct the world. But bathed in the blue of that mountain range are Hebron, Bethlehem, Bethel and Jerusalem—and the breath comes quicker and a thrill of strange ecstasy flashes through the heart. Why should I not delight in this land? Jesus came to it once, and never passed beyond its narrow bounds, until his death. To this same land Jesus will come again. With an open Bible and an open heart, you cannot doubt it. And we shall be with him then. Our loved ones, who elude the search of our eyes in the sweet, blue sky by day, and the hungering hand by night—may all shall stand with us there and through eyes that shall never weep again, or grow dim with years, shall view with us the old homeland of the Bible and of Jesus our Lord.

Tomorrow morning I shall be in Egypt 287 miles away.

W. T. TIBBS.

Most Important Need of Farmers.

What are the most important needs of farmers? Is it simply business ability and shrewdness that will enable them to accumulate many dollars, or is it a fund of good common sense and good judgment, the possession of which will enable them to make the farm produce a good income and a pleasant home in which to raise a family that will lead righteous lives? While a few make the former their sole object in life, and as a rule do not find much happiness, the great body of farmers who believe in the latter needs usually lead happy and contented lives and find enjoyment in their work.

Among the many other needs of progressive farmers, R. C. Trowbridge in the New York Tribune-Farmer, says:

The first need of the farmer is a sound, healthy body, strong and able to perform well the labors that are required of him as a tiller of the soil, and as a principal factor in this country of supplying 76,000,000 of people with the necessities and luxuries of life.

The farmer needs to be possessed of good judgment and a head with a large active brain capacity to manage his farm and business in the most successful manner. He also needs proper training, experience, and education. A genuine farmer needs to be born and reared on the farm, for the experiences of childhood and youth give him an advantage over those who do not begin farming till of mature age.

A farmer, to be a success, needs to love his farm, his work, and his home surroundings. If he delights in keeping stock, he should secure good stock that please him, and should take the best care of them.

A farmer needs a good wife to preside over and take charge of the household affairs; one who is accustomed to farm life and enjoys it; one who can make a genuine loaf of bread, who is industrious and frugal, who will help him to preserve and care for what he produces. He also should see that the wife has things handy for her comfort, and strive to make her happy in all her family relations.

The first need of the young farmer starting off in life is to respect himself, by being honest and true in his dealings with all mankind. All farmers need to be men of moral worth, having character for honesty above reproach, commanding the respect of every one known as the true salt of the earth.

The one great need of farmers is money for the proper transaction of business, to purchase stock, tools and machinery, to pay hired help, and for repairs on farm and buildings.

The need of the young man of small means—a would-be farmer—is to hire to some good farmer for a term of years, save his money till able to purchase a suitable farm, rather than mortgage a farm and probably lose it in the end.

Farmers need to build good houses in which they may live comfortably, and pass the summer and winter with their families. Farmers usually need large, commodious well-built barns in which to store hay and grain and house their stock, besides sheds and outbuildings in which to store tools and machinery to protect and preserve them. The buildings should be so arranged as to be convenient and handy, forming windbreaks to protect stock while in the yard.

Farmers as a class need pluck, energy, and push to succeed in all the various duties on the farm, being exposed to all kinds of weather—sunshine and heat in summer, and the cold blasts of winter, which demand such qualities to save from discouragement.

Farmers need to steer clear from the use of intoxicating liquors, that ruin the body and befog the brain, unfitting them to properly manage their business. A drunk man is worthless in any place that you may put him. A farmer needs all his brains kept in perfect order to succeed well in his honorable calling. Farmers need the best of all around common sense of any class of people in the world, on account of the importance of their occupation. They need the respect of all classes of society in striving to obtain an honest living by hard labor and by feeding the millions depending on them. Thus farmers are humanity's true friends: the great saviors from starvation, promoting comfort, health and happiness in this world and saving life.

A farmer needs a variety of tools to work his land properly, and to till thoroughly and cultivate the soil according to the most approved and improved methods to produce the best results. He needs to learn to use these tools properly, to keep them in order, and house them when not in use.

The farmer needs to study the nature of different soils and their best adaptation for raising certain grasses, grains, seeds, fruits, berries, vegetables, etc., and should strive to turn every acre of land to its best possible use.

Farmers need plenty of fruit of good variety for their families and to furnish for the markets. They should have well tilled vegetable gardens and flower gardens for wife and children.

Many ignorant farmers are much in need of instruction which they might secure by reading our farm papers, which treat on the different ways of farming and of the best methods; but they are so prejudiced against what they term "book farming" that they cannot be improved. They will not read to inform themselves if papers cost them nothing, and are too stingy to purchase. Such farmers are saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung. You can not make them believe that sometimes for a few cents expended for papers dollars will be saved to them by lessons learned from those who have had large experience.

Farmers have need to attend the farmer's institutes that are being held for their benefit every winter in many states. Much valuable knowledge can be gained from able and experienced farmers, from instructive and educated lecturers, and from teachings of our scientific men on the various matters pertaining to stock raising, dairying, fruit growing, tilling the soil properly, and all matters of interest to the farmer. Farmers need all the knowledge that can be gained from books that treat on farming, giving experience and lessons from able men of the past and present.

Farmers need to be industrious and systematic in all their arrangements, and should be models of progress in all departments of farming, having the best farming tools and machinery. Farmers need to appreciate the privileges they enjoy in our America, the grandest and best country in the world for farming purposes. Its great extent, with millions of uncultivated acres of rich land ready to be occupied, with its great variety of climate, soil and products, its beautiful prairie soils, superior to anything on earth for stock raising, for grains, fruits and vegetables. All these combined advantages will place our farmers conspicuously before us as the world's greatest producers and benefactors.

Farmers need to organize and unite as one body to place men in power and position who will legislate for them and protect their interests. In times past farmers have been considered incapable of making laws or of executing them properly. They have been called mudsills, clodhoppers, hayseeds, etc., but their intelligence of today and their important position are calling them out to take a hand in matters of legislation.

Farmers need all the help we can get from our farm papers that are being published for their special benefit, where everything of importance in the farmer's line is discussed weekly by men of experience and intelligence, men whose heads are filled with useful farm knowledge that farmers should know.

A farmer needs that keen discrimination in planning for the future that is acquired by constant practice and observation through his past years, knowing that time and experience are necessary factors in developing and rounding out the capabilities of the genuine farmer. Yet people talk, and many suppose that almost any person who fails to succeed in any other business is good enough for a farmer, and may succeed and perhaps excel, in farming. Such an idea is false; only taught by people who are ignorant of the needs of the farmer.

Let us for a moment consider the farmers and stock raisers of our western states, who raise horses, cattle, sheep and swine, wheat, corn, and wool, to supply not only our great America, but many other portions of the habitable globe. No other such class of strong, hardy, industrious, enterprising and valuable men can be found in the world, so necessary, so helpful, so reliable, so useful and indispensable, as our farmers, who feed the world, and to whom America and many other nations would do homage as the strongest pillars of the earth.

The Negro Of the North.

Alfred A. Taylor, formerly Republican candidate for Governor of Tennessee, says that the South, if let alone, will settle the negro problem to the satisfaction of the civilized world. He says that the North is having a taste of what the South has been experiencing all the while, and that it has waked up to the situation which confronts the South.

The Methodist ministers of Cincinnati considered "The Negro Question in the South" and were informed by Dr. Thirkield of the Freedman's Aid and Southern Educational Society, that the negro centers are not in the far South, except at New Orleans. There are Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. He said: "The negroes are coming North in herds, and instead of being a Southern problem we shall find it in reality a Northern problem."

In this connection the Indianapolis Sentinel says: Indianapolis people are beginning to learn the truth of this proposition from experience and to realize that it is quite a serious problem.

The Shoe on the Other Foot.

"These shoes, doctor," said the cobbler, after a brief examination, "ain't worth mending."

"Then, of course," said the doctor, turning away, "I don't want anything done to them."

"But I charge you fifty cents, just the same."

"What for?"

"Well, sir, you charged me five dollars the other day for telling me there wasn't anything the matter with me."—Chicago Tribune.

JUSTICE.

One of the indications of worth is complainings. We would do good to all men, but in so doing we must go by the rule of justice to all men, and in pursuing such a course some one will think we are after them, and in this they are right, if they are in the way of justice. The rich, the poor, the thrifty or stagnant as such lose their power when right is regarded.

HARMONY.

The State Campaign Committee meeting in Louisville was of the nature of an old-time Democratic gathering. Every member of the committee was enthusiastic over the harmony that prevails in the ranks, because of the disposition of so many like Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge who have heretofore been somewhat estranged from the party and had decided to vote with and use their influence for the ticket, the utmost harmony between Democratic nominees, the good feeling of defeated candidates who have pledged their support and offered their services to the committee and also the good feeling of State Central and Executive Committees, notwithstanding recent strife, all furnish unmistakable evidence of a large majority.

Chairman of the Campaign Committee places the majority for November at 30,000. The committee will not be satisfied with a certain majority and will contend for every inch of ground. The best speakers of the party will be on the stump and Republicans will be required to discuss State questions and to give evidence of sincerity and reasons for past conduct.

The Advocate can realize a good majority, but an old-time vote with a rousing old-time majority is what we will look for. Everybody to his post, and with one united effort it will be done handsomely.

A SPECIAL DUTY.

During the few days before us Evangelist M. B. Williams, of Kansas, and his singing assistant, Prof. Hicks, will labor for the salvation of our people. We suppose all men are desirous of a preparation for eternity. It is surely coming to them and there is no evading it. Time for that preparation is now, because we have no knowledge as to when the end will come. All we can say is, it is as surely coming as the tree felleth, so will it be throughout all eternity, and the time to prepare to meet thy God in the judgement is now. We would urge our people, every man, woman and child to be serious. Another tidal wave may never come to those now living, and hence the wisdom of a decision now. A complete turning away from sin, a giving of the life to God. The evangelist and all saved people hold themselves ready and anxious to give any instruction that may be needed.

Some of our friends think us meddlesome; others are of the opinion that we do not use sufficient voltage when we turn the lights on. To all such, we have to say that we are here, that we have a duty to perform and shall endeavor to discharge that duty free from all personalities, with regard to the rights of all men, and free from favoritism.

EX-GOVERNOR BRADLEY ROASTS HIS OWN PARTY.

"Gentlemen, has it come to this? Even under that law you and I have denounced as the Goebel law, the officers of election have the right to ask every man that comes to register what his politics are, and even under that law, when they come to select officers of election, they have a right to ascertain the politics of men and divide the officers of election equally; and yet, while we denounce the Goebel law that gives us an equal division of these officers, you are asked to sustain the ruling of this committee which denies to us anything in the neighborhood of an equal number of officers."—Extract from Ex Governor Bradley's speech made before the Republican Convention.

How Sea-Birds Drink.

The means by which sea-birds quench their thirst when far out at sea is described by an old skipper, who tells how he has seen birds at sea, far from any land that could furnish them water, hovering around and under a storm cloud, clattering like ducks on a hot day at a pond, and drinking in the drops of rain as they fell. They will smelt a rain equal a hundred miles distant, or even farther off, and scud for it with almost inconceivable swiftness.

A Steamer's Mail Matter.

It was a colossal amount of mail matter that the Teutonic took into port at New York on a recent voyage. There were 527,270 letters alone. Allowing five inches as the average length of each envelope, this collection would make a single string end to end of 219,695 feet, or more than 40 miles. The 870 bags of second-class mail matter would make a column exactly 870 feet high, allowing one foot as the thickness of each bag. This enormous mass was transferred from the steamer to the mail-boat by 20 men in just 30 minutes.

No reserved seats at the Gospel Tent. Come early.

Powers Trial.

Hog Cholera—How it Started.

It has long been a mystery how hog cholera breaks out in widely separated districts of the Eastern, and a few of the Northern and middle States without any apparent cause or known reason, writes Dr. Galen Wilson in the Inland Farmer. It was formerly supposed that the infection came from live, fat hogs transported by railroad from the West to the slaughter houses of the East, that had been exposed to the disease before shipment, and some of the germs incubated enroute and others at a still later date, and so the disease was scattered wherever these hogs were conveyed. But a scientific gentleman who has made a close study of the question for a series of years, has arrived at the conclusion that the wide dissemination of the disease, at times, in the East and North.

It is known that the laws of Canada concerning hog cholera or swine plague are copied after the stringent laws of the mother country, England, on the same subject. The substance of these laws are as follows. When the disease breaks out in a herd, every one of them must be slaughtered at once, the carcasses destroyed, and if they were harbored in pens, these and all their appurtenances must be consumed by fire. How natural it is that some Canadians do as the English are doing; that is, when even among the herd shows any sign of the disease, or if the disease breaks out in any nearby herd, for such owners at once to ship them off as store hogs or feeders, across the line into the United States to some live stock market. Many such shipments enter at Vermont, Buffalo, and doubtless at most of the ports of entry on the Northern boundary of the Eastern and middle States. On their arrival at the port of entry they are readily purchased by dealers, and pork being very dear, they are soon re-sold to farmers, keepers of large country hotels, prisons, asylums, country farms, etc., and are thus scattered over a large extent of territory. Hog cholera germs they have in their systems, and many of them are likely to be thus affected, will break out into well defined cholera when the term of incubation expires, which ranges from a few days to two weeks. This assures time to ship them out of Canada after exposure to the disease, and before it shows itself. This is a bit of "sharp practice" on the part of those who do it knowingly; but that it is done, evidences enough exist in Michigan, New York, Vermont and Massachusetts which seem to confirm it. Look out for store hogs shipped in from Canada, for this is the only method some have to "save their bacon."

MT. STERLING, - KY.

Wonderful Start.

The great gospel meetings in the Big Tent, on Bank Street, under direction of Rev. M. B. Williams and Prof. Ira E. Hicks, has made a start. It was a wonderful start.

There were, conservatively estimated to be, between 1,500 and 1,600 people in attendance Sunday night. His lecture on "the Bible" was the most powerful ever heard in our section.

The choir of nearly 300 good singers is worth hearing even if you have to come miles to hear it.

Services on Sunday at 10:30 a. m., 3 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. Week days, 8 p. m. and 7:30 p. m., except Monday when at 7:30 p. m. services will be held.

Don't fail to come every service.

Breathitt County Man Dead.

Goodloe Combs, of Breathitt, was a witness in the Jett White case at Cynthiana. He is a victim of morphine and whisky. On Friday afternoon his condition became serious and physicians, including Dr. Taulbee, of Jackson, were called in. There was little or no relief in the treatment. In great suffering he lived until Saturday about 10 o'clock. His body was taken to Jackson for burial. He was an ex-convict having been pardoned. He was sent to the penitentiary from Powell county where he with an accomplice, some years ago, assassinated Mr. Rose in Powell county.

Are You Going?

The W. C. T. U. Women are going to have an excursion to Tort and Natural Bridge for the benefit of the City fountain fund as soon as the evangelical meeting closes. The women are going to add some very enjoyable features. Every one will doubtless patronize this worthy enterprise and enjoyable day's outing. Date will be announced later.

Summer Coon.

BUOVILLE, KY., July 27, 1903.

MR. EDITOR:—I wish to keep you informed as posted on all the latest happenings and things generally transpiring in Buoville. Myself and Mr. South Bruton set sail with our honey fleet for Fort Desbark, which is just across the Carlyle bay, where milk and honey flows by the barrels. Our fleet started out from Buoville Saturday morning at 3 o'clock and we landed at Fort Desbark at 6 o'clock sharp. We cast anchor for a little while taken on a large cargo of the finest honey you ever tasted yours lips with. After getting about twelve tons of the bee labor loaded on our large fleet we went ashore for the purpose of taking a little land recreation watch we enjoyed and ate a long sea voig. The people of Carlyle treat us in the grandest hospital style we ever had; we acted for a while when our time was up. I met one of my old Bugjue creditors and he asked me if I ever thought about a little calamity water dist that we contracted between us away back twenty years ago. I told him I had cast all those old days aside long ago and was now trying to make sun more new ones.

We, as we are going to have a large evangelizing meeting in a few days we propose to make the Matilee Phillips the sweetest and happiest place on God's green earth. We are all swimming now in Jeaback honey; come on with your good meetings we will be in good shape to take holt of anything. We Phillips are a noble genius set of first class eat and drinkers, they don't want Belknap for Governor. Beckham is good enough for us: we have no Boekner and Owens kind of Democrats in the Phillips; the Phillips Republican and Democrats are clean people, while we differ a little in our political news, it cuts no figure in our sociability. We only no ourselves as we go along; we might not be to-morrow what we are to-day, therefore we look to time to give our pedigree. Don't tamper with us, offer no temptations, and it will be found that we are as square as pised along the line politically.

It is refreshing to learn that the $9,000,000 thus far expended by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, for buildings and other expenses not one dollar has been misappropriated. This information is given out by the Secretary of the Treasury, after a thorough investigation of the books, and speaks well for the Exposition management.

EARLY PHOTOGRAPHY.

Pictures Which Were Taken on Waxed Paper Fifty Years Ago.

A collection of early New York photographs shown in lantern slides at the New York Historical society was of peculiar interest, not alone from the nature of the subjects, but because the pictures were taken upon waxed paper negatives 50 years ago, says the New York Times. The slides were made from the original negatives taken by Victor Prevost, one of the pioneers in photography, who had a studio for many years on Broadway. The majority of the views were taken from 1832 to 1854.

The negatives were but recently discovered, and are now owned by W. J. Scandlin, of Brooklyn, who gave a brief lecture upon the views.

This collection, which numbers in all about 200 negatives of various sizes, some being over 15 inches square, is the largest of its kind in existence. The Smithsonian institution has but 50 waxed paper negatives, and the photographic department of Columbia university, which has one of the best collections in the country, has barely half a dozen of these early examples of the days when photography was beginning to supersede the more difficult process of daguerotypes.

Among the New York views of 50 years ago which were shown upon the screen were two of Columbia university when, as a college, it occupied a large plot of ground at Park place and Church street. One of these pictures showed the east wing of the old college hall, with venerable trees bordering the walk, while the other was that of President King's house. Others showed the old New York Society Library building on the corner of Broadway and Leonard street; the old Broadway theater, on Broadway, near North street; the interior of Tripler hall, a favorite Broadway concert hall; a view of the Battery before the present park had entirely been filled in, some old houses on Front street, views of the upper part of the city when buildings were scarcer than now, and a number of West Point scenes of half a century ago.

Many of these pictures, Mr. Scandlin explained, required an exposure of from 15 minutes to one hour to take.

ENGLISH TOWNS ARE GROWING

Marvellous Expansion of Certain Municipalities in Last Half Century.

A government blue-book, just issued in England, publishes summary tables of the census of 1901, which furnish striking evidence of the manner in which even the smaller towns have been developed during the last half-century at the expense of the rural districts. Thus, says the New York Post, Barrow-in-Furness, which numbered only 1,000 inhabitants in 1851, has now more than 57,000; Bradford has risen from 2,000 to more than 47,000; West Hertsford from 4,000 to 62,000; and Rhondda from 4,000 to 113,000. But the growth of new towns in the neighborhood of London, practically extensions of the metropolis, is still more striking. East Ham has grown from a village of 2,000 inhabitants to a community of 96,000, the greatest part of this increase having taken place in the last ten years; West Ham has been swollen from 19,000 inhabitants to 267,000; Walthamstow has increased from 4,700 to 95,000; Tottenham, from 7,000 to 102,000; Leyton, from 4,000 to 98,000. The steady outward pressure of London is shown, too, at Croydon and Willesden, where in each added case more than 100,000 persons have been added to the population since 1851. The population of London proper (the administrative county) has almost doubled in the same period. On the other hand, the population of the rural districts continues to decline or remain almost stationary. Herefordshire and Shropshire have lost 10,000 each in the last quarter of a century. In many counties the excess of births over deaths is almost exactly neutralized by migration.

Grip's Grim Grasp Caused Heart Disease.

Could Not Lie On Left Side.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nerve Cure Me.

Mr. H. R. Jobe, formerly of Birmingham, Ala., writes from Edinboro, the same state as follows:

"It is with the greatest pleasure that I recommend Dr. Miles' Nerve and Heart Cure. I only wish that I could tell every sufferer how good it is."

Last winter I had a severe attack of La Grippe, which left my heart in a very bad condition. I could not lie down for the smothering spells it would give me, and the feeling of oppression around my heart. I had not been so that I could lie on my left side for a long time. I got my Heart Cure and took three bottles. I have no trouble now with my heart and can lie on my left side as well as my right. Formerly I had suffered years with nervous prostration. I had tried so many remedies that I had got out of heart of getting anything that would help me. The nerves of my heart were so affected that sometimes it would leave beats so it would seem to stop altogether. It was on the advice of a lady friend that I tried your Heart Cure. I felt better after the first few doses and two bottles of Nerve and one of Heart Cure made me feel like a new person. My heart is all right and my nervousness is all gone. I never fail to recommend it to others afflicted as I was."

All druggists sell and guarantee first bottle Dr. Miles' Remedies. Send for free book on Nervous and Heart Diseases. Address Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Never Know When to Look for it.—Mt. Sterling Example.

A stitch, a twitch—
A twinge of pain.
A crick in the back—
Never know when it's coming
If the kidneys are weak.
Doan's Kidney pills a sure preventive.

Read this Mt. Sterling proof:
R. M. Pitman, farmer, living three miles southwest of town on the Levee pike, says: "Some few months ago while stooping over to put on my shoes one morning I felt a sharp catch in the small of my back and it was some little while before I could straighten up so severe was the pain. My back bothered me a great deal from that time on, with a dull tired aching that made me feel miserable and with it I had another weakness which was very annoying, especially at night. These symptoms gave plain proof that my kidneys were affected and when I saw Doan's Kidney pills advertised and especially recommended as a kidney remedy, I went to F. C. Duereson's drug store and got a box. I had taken but a short course of the treatment before I felt greatly benefited. The aching was greatly relieved and the trouble with the kidney secretions was corrected. The least I can do in return is to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."
Sold for fifty cents per box by all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

THE NEW CATTLE LAND.

Changes in Methods of Feeding May Make the South Rival the West.

Based on their prophecy upon adaptability of the cassava, scientists who have been conducting a series of experiments in the South predict that the South Atlantic and Gulf States will soon develop a stock raising boom that will land them in the front ranks of the great hog and cattle producing regions of the world.

In experiments made, emaciated cows that had foraged for scant winter food in pine forests were given a daily diet of succulent cassava root for seventy-five days. In that time they made a gain of over sixty percent in weight. The cost of the live weight produced by feeding cassava was one cent a pound, and the profit made in fattening beef was $9.10 per cent. As hundreds of thousands of acres in many parts of the South peculiarly adapted to cassava are as yet undeveloped, and as experiments now prove that this prolific plant will grow from North Carolina to the Mexican border, a not unwarranted confidence exists that a new era is at hand in the stock-raising industry of the country.

The revelations made in fattening hogs is equally significant. Fed on this tuber these animals in seventy-five days made a gain of ninety-five percent in weight which was more than hogs fed on corn during the same period; the cost of cassava for the seventy-five days was $5.52, and the corn $18.07. The average cost of the gain in the weight of the hogs when fed on cassava was a cent a pound. Official experiments in feeding hogs with corn in Alabama showed that the cost of the gain in weight was three and one-half cents a pound, in Massachusetts two and four-fifths cents a pound; in Vermont three and seven-tenths cents.

Properly used, the agricultural experts announce, cassava will be far more profitable than any other known crop which can be converted into hogs and hog products.

The latest census places the number of swine in the South Atlantic States at 5,000,000 and in the South Central States at 10,800,686.

The total number of cattle is placed at 17,313,695.—That these could all be placed in prime market condition by feeding cassava has been demonstrated in the experiments made.

The Department of Agriculture believes that a new and enormous source of profit is opened to the entire South.

The cassava has many other uses. It is prepared in several ways for the table, and its manufacture into starch is a growing industry.—The West Hillsboro Press, Clearwater, Fla., July 24th.

No such thing as "summer complaint" where Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is kept handy. Nature's remedy for every looseness of the bowels. 34t

For the Bird's Welfare.

The government of India has at last decided that no more bird skins and plumage shall be exported to be offered up at the London feather market—the principal one in the world—on the altar of fashion. Again and again India has been urged to copy the legislation of the United States and to save the crops from the depredations of insects by saving the birds from the shot and the nets of those in the pay of the traders.

Among the visitors—and they have included English and foreign royalties—who have passed through the acres of duck warehouses off Houndsditch on the days preceding the sales, held once every two months, none could have failed to be profoundly touched by the awful tributes exacted from India.

The green parrots alone—so adaptable are they in the hands of the plumaier—may have been seen piled up by the hundreds of thousands—green hillocks flecked with crimson. The chagrin of the Indian trader can result only in yet greater prosperity to the ostrich farmers of South Africa.

Eczema, scald head, hives, itcheiness of the skin of any sort instantly relieved, permanently cured. Doan's Ointment. At any drug store. 34t

The great Assouan reservoir in Egypt, which was completed last year, has now been emptied of the water which was stored therein. The surplus waters of the Nile river was turned into this reservoir by the building of the immense dam at Assouan, and this water has been used for irrigation of the land, resulting most satisfactorily as the area which may be cultivated has been largely increased and the growth of summer crops assured. Considerably more cotton will doubtless be produced in Egypt as the result of this reservoir.

"After my first baby was born I did not seem to regain my strength although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of getting better I grew weaker every day. My husband insisted that I take Wine of Cardui for a week and see what it would do for me. I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength and health slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."
Wine of Cardui relieves the organs of generation for the ordeal of pregnancy and childbirth. It prevents miscarriage. No woman who takes Wine of Cardui need fear the coming of her child. If Mrs. Unrath had taken Wine of Cardui before her baby came she would not have been weakened as she was. Her rapid recovery should commend this great remedy to every expectant mother. Wine of Cardui regulates the menstrual flow.

MT. STERLING, KY.

FACTS and OBSERVATIONS

ON O & K. RAILROAD.

On Tuesday morning of last week the writer left Trenton. The train connects near Jackson with train on O. & K. We stopped at Cannel City, the terminus, and went to Caney where we spent the night. Sickens prevented our attending a temperance lecture or preaching in the evening at school house and church. Mrs. A. K. Day, wife of the merchant, was quite sick. Here, as in all this section, business is flush. Every man and boy who will work has employment. There is no excuse for idleness.

Dr. Gevedon, of Hazel Green, was delivering at Caney a nice piano. Cannel City has a new $2 hotel, kept by Mr. Parks. N. B. Maxey has moved to Lexington, his former home.

LEE CITY.

We went to Lee City on Wednesday afternoon. There was no prayer meeting in town. A. H. Stampler, of Campton and O. H. Pollard, of Jackson, were in town. A case for selling whiskey without license was being tried before Police Judge E. P. Hobbs, who has recently assumed this office. Mr. Pollard had been invited to give some instruction to the new judge to start him off right, and was also prosecuting the violator of law. Mr. Stampler was defending. The case was concluded on Thursday, resulting in a fine and flogging away of other cases.

The Judge will evidently do his part in suppressing lawlessness. On Thursday morning near here a leg rolled over Carl Baye, aged 16, son of Sam Bays, and severely bruised one side of his body and out a long gash in his head.

The wives of C. F. Garinger and John Graham are quite sick. Mr. Rose, son-in-law of Ambrose Nickell, is convalescent from typhoid fever.

Thos. Gibbs and his son, Jesse, below Helechsawa, are sick with typhoid.

Probably there would be less sickness in town if the pools of stagnant water and mudholes in the street were drained. This should be attended to at once.

J. W. Hutcherson has gone to Alabama to superintend lumber interests of his firm.

HELECHAWA.

There are two stores here: Parker & Carpenter and Holton & Cash. Both handle general merchandise and ties.

Here on Thursday we unexpectedly met our father, J. G. Trimble, en route to Hazel Green. Mr. Ritchhouse, proprietor of Swango Springs, meets his guests here, if notified.

En route on horse-back from Lee City we stopped to say "howdy" to our friend David Wilson and wife, and also to escape a drenching rain. Dinner was announced. We were surprised. We looked at our watch and the hour was 10:45 (correct time). We spent afternoon on grassy. For the first time we called at the store of F. O. Craft and supplied his wants. We sold the Advocate to five of the six nearest neighbors to whom we applied.

Our attention was especially attracted to the residence of Mat J. Long and wife a young farmer. It is a nice, modern two-story frame. Across the front gable his name is painted in large letters. The interior furnishing revealed refined taste. We do not know that they are rich for that section, but we do know they are willing to spend their money in making home attractive and comfortable for the family and all who may chance to visit or pass that way. We commend this to all. On inquiry we learned that he married a granddaughter of Judge Linden, deceased.

We reached Hazel Green about dusk, where we stayed until about 5 o'clock next afternoon. J. F. Day is not improving. Rain fell almost continuously from early morn till 4 o'clock, and was generally over a large part of Central and Eastern Kentucky.

On the preceding Friday night the home of the aged Harrison Swango, former owner of Swango Springs, was destroyed by fire. A defective chimney did it. Most of his household furniture and bedding was saved. The dining room, kitchen, pantry and cellar and their supplies were lost. No insurance.

Stopping en route we reached Lee City after dark. The morning train from Cannel City does not connect with L. & E. for Lexington, but the afternoon train (if on time) does. The east bound L. & E. morning train connects with O. & K. and reaches Cannel City or Caney for dinner. The afternoon L. & E. train does not connect.

JACKSON.

We spent a few hours here on Saturday till 2:30. The town was quiet. Nothing has happened. Comment not necessary. The people of America know of Breathitt. We reached home Saturday night ready for the Williams meeting, on Bank Street, which began Sunday morning.

Several bargains in investment city property for sale by T. F. Rogers, Real Estate Broker.

Howard Anderson has rented the Leslie McCormick residence, on Winn Street, and taken possession.

Major A. T. Wood is rebuilding his residence on Winn street, recently destroyed by fire.

The Frankfort Company of 50 men went to Frankfort on Monday.

The Advocate's issue is 2,250, actual count.

TAKING ON FLESH.

Now a 150-Pound Man Qualified for a 165-Pound Job.

The New York Post tells of the exploit of a slum Chicago janitor who wanted to become a policeman. This man, Patrick Brannon by name, had every qualification for a place on the force except that he weighed only 150 pounds, whereas the required weight for a policeman was 165. He came up for examination, and was told that this disqualified him, but the clerk added kindly that he would have another chance in four weeks. The janitor went at once to a young tenant of the building who had acted for some time as his guide, philosopher and friend, and asked him about those "15 pounds," said the young man. "We can fix them."

Then began a fight of art against nature. The janitor and his two assistants had formerly worked together. Now the two sub-janitors had to do all the work while their chief directed their operations from his elegant and absolute leisure. The janitor was an abstemious man, but he found on day a keg of beer and a capacious mug in his room. They were sent at his young friend's order with the injunction that he was to drink a mugful every hour. He ate hugely of potatoes, bread with thick butter and sugar on each slice, and fat meat. Yet at the end of two weeks he had reached a weight of only 159 pounds. In the third week he added that three pounds to this. Never did a jockey or the coxswain of a varsity crew work harder to lose the critical pounds of flesh than he did to gain them. The night before the examination he still lacked three-quarters of a pound. The account of the final morning is not particularly pleasant reading. His instructor forced a stupendous breakfast down his throat, and then, until the hour of trial, compelled him to drink a glass of water every few minutes. Suffice it to say, he tipped the official scales at 165 pounds 1 ounce, to the great amazement of the examiners, who declared that his performance was without a parallel. He immediately forewore beer, bread and potatoes, and went back to his old diet, with the result that Chicago, with its 165-pound limit, will very soon have a 150-pound policeman on the force and impossible to get rid of.

KING OF ENGLAND'S CROWN.

Some of the Notable Gems That Are Set Into It.

The most important historic jewels in the present imperial crown, says the London Globe, are the large spinel ruby in the center of the front cross-pate, the large pale sapphire on the circlet of the crown in front, and the small, but finely colored sapphire in the center of the cross-pate above the mound at the top of the crown.

The history of the so-called ruby is well known and is of great interest. In the fourteenth century, says Mr. Cyril Davenport, in the Comptons, it belonged to the king of Granada, and Pedro the Cruel, king of Castile, received this king under the guise of friendship in the Alcazar at Seville. Here he was murdered for the sake of his jewels, among which was this stone. Pedro afterward gave it to Edward, the Black Prince, after the battle at Navarrete, as a mark of gratitude for his successful help, and it was also supposed to have been worn in the crown of Henry V. at Agincourt. On this occasion it may have helped to save a king's life, as the Duke of Albecon aimed a blow at Henry, which was turned by his crown, then worn over his helmet.

The stone is a finely colored, deep red spinel, a mineral which is chiefly found in the river beds of Ceylon, Burma and Siam. Like most oriental stones, this particular jewel has been pierced; the top of the piercing is now filled by a small ruby set in gold and the stone is uncut, but polished on its natural irregular surface. It is irregularly drop-shaped and about two inches in length.

The second notable jewel in the imperial crown is the large pale sapphire in front of the circlet. It was worn in the crown by Charles II., and ultimately became the property of Cardinal York, who bequeathed it to the prince regent, afterward George IV. The prince gave it to Princess Charlotte, but on her death it was returned, as it was properly considered to be a crown jewel. It was partially pierced, which may mean it was intended to be used as a brooch, but never finished; or it might perhaps have been intended to serve as a support for an aigrette, in which case a half-piercing would be enough. It is cut en cabochon, as most ancient and medieval stones were, and as colored stones should be, the edges being trimmed into the form of a long symmetrical oval. No doubt this is an oriental stone; it is about two inches in length.

Edward the Confessor's emerald is much smaller and of deep color; it has been recut in brilliant form, probably for Charles II., which was quite unnecessary. It is said to have been taken out of the confessor's ring, which was buried with him, and it has the reputation of being an antidote to cramp. A story is told about it that relates that the confessor, in one of his walks about Westminster, met a beggar who asked for alms, and the saint, being at that moment short of money, gave him his ring in charity in the name of St. John. Some time afterward some English pilgrims, traveling in the Holy Land, got into difficulties and consulted an old man, a stranger, who happened to be in their company. On hearing that the travelers were English, he revealed himself to them as St. John, the special patron of Edward, king of England, and he assisted them out of their troubles, and gave them a ring to take back to their monarch, with the message that he would meet him in paradise in six months' time. When in due time Edward received the ring, he at once recognized it as that he had given to the Westminster beggar, and when he died, according to the saint's prediction, it was buried with him in his shrine at Westminster.

Strange Story of a Picture.

In 1882 a picture, entitled "The Holy Family," was lent to the Bristol Young Men's Christian association, and the owner, a lady (Mrs. Morgan), was willing to accept £10 for it. The offer was not accepted. Mrs. Morgan bequeathed the picture at her death to a Liverpool gentleman, and the head of the Marlborough picture gallery has now estimated its value at about £10,000. The picture is the work of Pietro Cortona.

In 1869 he was elected County Judge of Nicholas county and was re-elected but resigned in '71 to become State Senator. In '78 he was elected Circuit Judge. ## A NEW ANAESTHETIC.

Narcotile Said to Be Superior to Chloroform and Ether.

Dr. T. Eastman, in a paper recently read before the Bournemouth Medical society in England, described his experience with a new anaesthetic, a bichloride of methyl ethylene called narcotile, which he believes has some important advantages over those now in use, for short anaesthesia. Says the New York Commercial Advertiser, "It acts rapidly and effectually, and produces no troublesome after-effect. In its administration the narcotile is placed in a bottle, and air forced through it to an inhaler which is held over the mouth and nose. The narcotile is very volatile, and the air in its passage becomes saturated with the vapor. It is also necessary for the same reason to keep the bottle in tepid water to maintain the requisite warmth. It resembles ether in its physiological action, but is rarely followed by the distressing sickness which accompanies and follows the administration of the latter. Owing to its extreme volatility, the patient rapidly recovers from it."

Big Ship Is a Failure.

The famous seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, which was launched on July 10, 1902, and from which so much was expected, appears to be an acknowledged failure. The largest schooner that was ever floated is, according to latest advice, to be dismantled, her elaborate machinery taken out of her and her hull to be converted into a mere barge. When the Lawson came to the port of Philadelphia on her first trip she was kept waiting for her cargo of coal for a considerable time and at last went down the river with between 2,000 and 3,000 tons less than her full capacity. Even under these circumstances she grounded twice while proceeding down the river. She was then taken off this route and sent to Baltimore, but she grounded when going out under a similar partial load. It was also found that notwithstanding her elaborate machinery she was a very difficult ship to handle in anything but the most favorable weather. In a head wind it took nearly an hour to put her about. —Philadelphia Inquirer.
